

NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

Dorian Barrow is a Lecturer in Science Education at the School of Education, UWI, St. Augustine.

Jerome De Lisle is currently a Lecturer in Educational Administration at the School of Education, UWI, St. Augustine. He has worked in measurement and evaluation in the past, and his current research interests are in schools experiencing challenge, national assessments of educational achievement, and in the impact and consequences of high stakes assessments at eleven plus.

Anthony Griffith is a Senior Lecturer in Social Studies in the School of Education at the Cave Hill Campus of The University of the West Indies (UWI). His major interests are in social studies and geographic education, teacher education, and education for development.

Steven Khan is a former teacher of mathematics and biology at secondary level in Trinidad. His areas of interest include the intersections between mathematics, aesthetics, and ethics in secondary mathematics education and teacher preparation, qualitative research methods, complexity theory and education and, pedagogy of (children's) popular culture. He currently lectures in Mathematics Education at UWI, St. Augustine.

Samuel Lochan is a Lecturer in Social Studies Education at the School of Education, UWI, St. Augustine, Trinidad.

Rawatee Maharaj-Sharma is a Lecturer in Science Education (Physics) at the School of Education, The University of the West Indies (UWI), St. Augustine. She previously lectured at York University, Canada for 5 years in Physics and Astronomy.

Bertram Ross is a former high school and college principal with extensive teaching and administrative experience. A pioneering examiner with CXC, Dr. Ross was a member of the OECS Education Reform Strategy Group. He was employed as Principal Lecturer in Teacher Education and Science at the HLSCC College in the BVI for six years and served as an adjunct Professor at the University of the Virgin Islands.

Sonia St. Hill is a Social Studies teacher at the Lodge School in Barbados. She obtained a Dip.Ed. and an M.Ed. from The University of the West Indies (UWI).

Jasmattie Yamraj is a doctoral candidate at Queen's University, Canada. She was employed for 10 years at the BVI High School as a senior Science teacher.