

Notes on Contributors

LETETIA ADDISON, PhD (Mathematics), MPhil (Statistics), is a Project Officer and Statistical Consultant at the University Office of Planning, and an Adjunct Lecturer in the Department of Behavioural Sciences, Faculty of Social Sciences, The University of the West Indies, St Augustine. She builds data-driven models for Higher Education data. Her research interests involve statistics education and multidisciplinary applications of mathematical and statistical models for sustainability in STEAM fields.

FAREENA ALLADIN is a PhD candidate in Sociology and Instructor in the Department of Behavioural Sciences, Faculty of Social Sciences, The University of the West Indies, St Augustine. Her academic background includes the areas of sociology, psychology, and public sector management. Her research interests include the sociology of food, health and illness, and statistics education.

ROGER BENT is a Student Services and Development Manager at the University of the West Indies, Mona. He has an MA in Higher Education: Student Personnel Administration, a BA in Media and Communication, and is now pursuing an MPhil in Educational Administration. He has worked in the areas of Student Affairs, Programme Management, and Education as well as Media, and now serves as the coordinator of the Debating and Public Speaking Programme at the UWI, Mona.

DELIA BRITO, a PhD candidate in Psychology, is a part-time Tutor/Assistant Lecturer (undergraduate statistics and research design course) in the Department of Behavioural Sciences, Faculty of Social Sciences, at The University of the West Indies, St Augustine. Her academic background includes Applied Psychology and her current research interests encompass childhood obesity, health behaviours, and child feeding practices in the Caribbean.

BEVERLY BURTE is a reference and instructional librarian at the University of the West Indies, Western Jamaica Campus. Mrs Burte holds an MA in Leadership in TVET and Workforce Development, with distinction, from The University of the West Indies, Mona. Her research interests are in leadership, information literacy skills, and youth development.

MERVIN E. CHISHOLM is Manager/Coordinator, Centre for Excellence in Teaching and Learning, University of the West Indies, Mona Campus. He also teaches adult and higher education in the School of Education. His research interests include curriculum studies, teaching and learning in adult and higher education and critical approaches to education.

TALIA ESNARD, PhD (Sociology), is a Senior Lecturer of Behavioural Sciences in the Faculty of Social Sciences at The University of the West Indies, St Augustine. Her research covers areas of women, work, and organisations with specific examinations of their experiences and praxes as mentors, leaders, and mothers. She has (co)authored and edited books on the tenure process, diversity, and inclusion, as well as mentoring and female entrepreneurship.

DEBRA FERDINAND-JAMES, PhD (Workforce Education and Development), is a Senior Lecturer and Coordinator of the Master's in Leadership in TVET and Workforce Development at the School of Education, The University of the West Indies, Mona. She is a member of the Mona Research Ethics Committee. Her research interests include graduate supervision, blended learning, and Industry 4.0.

KARLENE NELSON is a cataloguing and metadata Librarian at the Library of The University of the West Indies, Mona. She holds a Master's in Library Information Services and a BSc in Accounting and Management Studies. Her research interests include user engagement, information literacy instruction, reference services, and library technical services.

KEISHA SAMLAL, PhD candidate (Sociology), is a teaching assistant in the Department of Behavioural Sciences, Faculty of Social Sciences at The University of the West Indies, St Augustine. Her current research focuses on the social construction and experience/s of the fat female body within Caribbean society. Other areas of research interest include mentoring in higher education and Caribbean development.

MICHELLE STEWART-MCKOY, a trained educator, is the Faculty/Educational Development Specialist in the Centre for Excellence in Teaching and Learning (CETL) at The University of the West Indies, Mona. Her research interests include the use of eLearning technologies in developing countries, establishing Caribbean-based learner profiles and personas, maximising learning management systems in education, and integrating gamification and game-based learning in higher education in the Anglophone Caribbean.

PATRICK TJON-JAW-CHONG holds a Master of Education and a Bachelor of Fine Arts degree. He has been teaching in the Art Education department of the Advanced Teacher Training Institute (IOL) in Suriname since 2007. In 2018 he started his research on arts education and his focus now is on arts (cultural) education, from primary school to tertiary level.

YOLANDA TUGWELL is a Librarian at the Library of University of the West Indies, Mona. She holds a Master's in Library Information Services and a BA and Dip Ed. Her research interests include global librarianship, first-year experience, and information literacy.

PAUL A. WALCOTT, PhD, is a computer science Lecturer at The University of West Indies, Cave Hill. His research interests include online faculty learning communities, cross-classroom collaborative project-based learning, and game-based learning.

SHINIQUE WALTERS, PhD, is a Lecturer in the Department of Government of the Faculty of Social Sciences, University of the West Indies, Mona, where she teaches Research Methods and Gender Studies. She is also a Research Fellow at the Centre for Leadership and Government. She has worked in the areas of community development, project management, institutional research, monitoring and evaluation, and gender studies.