

Reviewers for This Issue

MONIKA ASNANI is a Professor of Family Medicine and Epidemiology at the Caribbean Institute for Health Research – Sickle Cell Unit, University of the West Indies, Mona, Jamaica. She has over seventeen years' experience of providing clinical care for persons with sickle cell disease (SCD). Her focus of research are (i) psychosocial outcomes and determinants in SCD and (ii) sickle nephropathy.

SANJAY BAHADOORSINGH is a professionally registered Electrical Engineer with a PhD in Electrical and Electronic Engineering from The University of Manchester, UK. He is currently the Deputy Dean of Enterprise Development and Outreach in the Faculty of Engineering at The University of the West Indies, St. Augustine, Trinidad. He is a Senior Lecturer in Energy Systems within the Department of Electrical and Computer Engineering.

ANNE-MARIA BANKAY is a retired Senior Lecturer in Modern Language Education. She currently works as an adjunct lecturer teaching Spanish language and Literary Translation. She holds a PhD in Spanish and Portuguese and a Master's Degree in Education from Stanford University, as well as a Dip. Ed., Master's and BA (Special) Hons. from The University of the West Indies, Mona, Jamaica.

DESRINE BOGLE is a Lecturer in French at The University of the West Indies, Cave Hill, Barbados. Her research interests include postcolonial translation and the translation of Creole proverbs from the Francophone and Anglophone Caribbean. She is a member of the translation studies research group, Traduction et Communication transculturelle (TRACT) at the Université Sorbonne Nouvelle-Paris 3.

DEON EDWARDS-KERR is a Senior Lecturer in Research and Assessment Methodologies in the School of Education, The University of the West Indies, Mona, Jamaica. She has more than twenty-five years' experience in Education, Training and Public Policy Development. She specialises in evaluating educational programmes and developing implementation approaches. She holds an MSc in Educational Research and a PhD in Educational Studies from the University of Manchester, UK.

DEBRA FERDINAND-JAMES, PhD, is an educational technologist at the School of Education, The University of the West Indies, St. Augustine, Trinidad. She has over twenty years of combined experiences teaching at the post-secondary level in the USA and the Caribbean that includes technology-related courses at the undergraduate and postgraduate levels. Her research interests include blended learning and Industry 4.0.

GLENDAY GAY is a Lecturer in the Department of Management Studies at The University of the West Indies, Cave Hill, Barbados. She holds a PhD in Information Systems from Nova Southeastern University. She is widely published in the areas of managing large online classes, and readiness for online teaching and learning. She teaches graduate courses on database design and management.

MECHELLE GITTENS holds PhD and MSc degrees in Computer Science (CS) from Western University, Canada and a BSc CS from The University of the West Indies, Cave Hill, Barbados, where she is now Senior Lecturer and Head of the Department of Computer Science, Mathematics and Physics. Her research focuses primarily on Lifestyle Technologies.

GEORGIANA GORDON-STRACHAN is the Director of the Tropical Metabolism Research Unit at the Caribbean Institute for Health Research of The University of the West Indies, Mona, Jamaica. She holds a PhD in Biochemistry from the University of the West Indies and an MSc in Health Policy, Planning, and Financing from the University of London. Dr Gordon-Strachan is the 2019 recipient of the UWI Vice Chancellor's Award for Excellence in Research.

CHARISSE GRIFFITH-CHARLES, PhD, Cert. Ed., TTLS, MISTT, FRICS, is a Senior Lecturer in the Department of Geomatics Engineering and Land Management and Deputy Dean of Undergraduate Student Affairs in the Faculty of Engineering, The University of the West Indies, St. Augustine, Trinidad. She lectures and researches in the areas of land administration, land surveying, and Geomatics.

NEIL HUGHES, PhD, is Director of Modern Language Teaching and Digital Learning Director for the Faculty of Arts at the University of Nottingham. He teaches Spanish language and culture modules and has research interests in blended language teaching, online learning design and Spanish politics. In his most recent work, he has looked at political opposition to tourism in Barcelona.

ROWENA KALLOO, PhD, is a Lecturer in Science Education (Biology) at the School of Education, The University of the West Indies, St. Augustine, Trinidad. Her research interests include inquiry based science education, environmental education, and student-centred pedagogies.

ROSLIN A. KHAN is Dean of the Faculty of Education and Humanities at the University of Guyana (UG). She has a BA (Spanish) and Post-Graduate Dip. Ed. (Distinction) from UG, an MA in Translation, University of Essex, UK, and a PhD in Spanish from The University of the West Indies, Mona, Jamaica. She represents the UG on the KIX LAC HUB of the OECS.

FENG LEI is an Associate Professor at Taiyuan University of Technology, China. He holds a PhD from Stellenbosch University, South Africa. He has published four books and a number of papers in the fields of Translation Studies and Second Language Acquisition.

KERWIN ANTHONY LIVINGSTONE is a specialist in Languages, Linguistics, and Education. He holds a BA degree in Modern Languages, an MA in Applied Linguistics, an MEd in Education Technology, a Doc. Cert. in Language Sciences, and a PhD in Language Sciences/Language Didactics. He is also a trained tertiary teacher (P.G.C.T.T. and P.G.D.E.T.T.).

JOANNE NAZIR, PhD, is a Lecturer in Science Education at the School of Education, The University of the West Indies, St. Augustine, Trinidad. She holds degrees in Science and Education from the University of the West Indies and a doctorate in Curriculum Studies and Teacher Development from the University of Toronto.

JOSEPH PEREIRA lectured in Spanish at The University of the West Indies, Mona, Jamaica for over forty-two years, specialising in Cuban literature. He served WIGUT, Jamaica for years. He also served The UWI as a Head and a Dean, then as Deputy Principal, Mona, from 2002 till his retirement in 2010. He has subsequently done several consultancies for both The UWI and other tertiary institutions.

MELVA PERSICO is a Senior Lecturer of Spanish in the Department of Languages at Clemson University in South Carolina, USA. She holds a PhD in Romance Studies with a focus on Latin American Literature from the University of Miami. Dr Persico has taught a variety of Spanish language courses in both face-to-face and online formats.

JENNIFER YAMIN-ALI, PhD, is a Senior Lecturer and former Director and Programme Coordinator at the School of Education, The University of the West Indies, St. Augustine, Trinidad. Her research interests include foreign language teaching and learning, evaluation of teacher education programmes, teacher educators, data-driven decision making capacity in schools, and how educational organisations function. She is the author of two research-based books (2014; 2021).