

Genevieve Ruth Phagoo currently coordinates the English Language Foundation Unit (Evening University) at The University of the West Indies, St. Augustine Campus. Her key research interests are British traditional literature and gender. Her postgraduate studies at the Master's level focused on medieval literature, specifically Chaucer. Dr. Phagoo's interest in medieval literature was expanded for her doctoral dissertation which engaged a postcolonial feminist perspective to analyse selected works of authors of the British canon and Caribbean verse (the Gawain-poet, Chaucer, Shakespeare, Tennyson and Walcott), and traces how these iconic male authors appropriate the Trojan and Arthurian foundation myths to interrogate or endorse ideological fixities about the woman in national narratives.

Paula Morgan is a Professor of West Indian Literature and Culture in the Department of Literary, Cultural and Communication Studies in The University of the West Indies, St Augustine. She has published numerous articles on domestic violence, the interface of ethnic and gender relations, the construction of Caribbean masculinities, and pedagogical approaches to literary and popular discourses. She has produced and/ or collaborated on numerous book length publications including The Terror and The Time: Banal Violence and Trauma in Caribbean Discourse Writing (UWI Press 2014); The Culture of Violence: A Trinidad and Tobago Case Study, edited with Valerie Youssef; an online journal collection In a Fine Castle: Childhood in Caribbean Imagi/Nations (2010); and Writing Rage: Unmasking Violence in Caribbean Discourse with Valerie Youssef (UWI Press 2006).

Dr J. Vijay Maharaj is a lecturer in the Department of Literary, Cultural and Communication Studies at The University of the West Indies St Augustine. Over the past two decades, she has developed deep expertise in one field – literacy, which includes the sub-categories of cultural and technological literacy but more importantly encompasses the traditional literacies of reading, writing, speaking and listening. Her publications and presentations try to exemplify all of this.
